Funds needed for S & A system

Money is starting to come in to replace the Search and Rescue PA system that has disappeared.

You'll recall that in last week's edition of The News we announced that Bill McKernan had presented The News with a crisp $100 bill as an incentive to the community. Since then, the Sierra Madre News has added $50.

Each donor's name will be published in The News weekly as the money comes in.

Miner Harkness estimates that about $1500 will be needed to replace the system with all the speakers and amplifiers.

An account has been opened at Sanwa Bank in Sierra madre and money may also be brought to Miner Harkness Insurance at 51 N. Baldwin and to The News office at 9 Kersting Court. That money will immediately be taken to Sanwa Bank and placed in the special Search and Rescue PA System fund for collection and, ultimately, for purchase of the system.

Harkness says the new system will be locked up in the Search and Rescue room in City Hall.

The system is used in all Search and Rescue activities and for such community functions as the Christmas activities.

Water subject of council debates, discussion

As is true of many cities nowadays, Sierra Madre expressed concern for a possible water shortage, some representing the City Council and some speaking from the audience, at the council meeting Tuesday evening.

The council adopted Resolution 90-25 which implements a water conservation program that should reduce water consumption by 10 percent.

At the suggestion of Councilman Clem Bartolai, they set a time goal for achieving the reduction and chose six and nine months to "look at the results." They will assess results after a year "and then take mandatory conservation measures."

The resolution suggests repairing plumbing fixtures, installing water-saving devices, taking shorter showers, watering lawn and garden as little as possible, among many other points toward water conservation.

Councilman Gary Adams, who, at the first meeting following his election, announced one of his goals as water conservation, cautioned the council again to "come up with a formula for those already conserving water. I don't think these people should be penalized . . . It is not fair to cut those already conserving the same as those not conserving water."

City Administrator Jim McRea suggested going back three years, checking those amounts and attempting to come up with some sort of conservation goal at that point.

In Community Communications, John Govorchin noted that city employees were "using a 5000-gallon water tank to wash down Orange Grove" after street construction "five times a day." He said, "I'll tell you why fire hydrants are open. They broke a line in front of my home four times in one day then they have to backwash the line both ways."

Laurie Cooper, who serves as Parks and Recreation commissioner, said, "The first to conserve (water) should be the city. The biggest consumers are the parks and recreation department. We need to give training to the people who operate the city

Fourth of July T-shirts designed by Hatcher

By Helen Walker

Artist Michael Hatcher won the contest for this year's Sierra Madre Fourth of July T-shirt. Michael, who has been a resident of Sierra Madre for seven years, is formerly from Arcadia. He lives in the canyon, which he loves, and tells us what good neighbors he has.

Michael is a free lance artist, working out of his home. He does watercolors and also designs business cards.

When asked where he came up with the idea of the old Red Car for his winning design, he said that he is aware of Sierra Madre history. He also wanted to bring to the attention of younger people what a good method of transportation this was.

These beautiful and colorful T-shirts may be purchased at Paper Palace, Abacus, Happy's Liquor Store, K.C.'s Closet and Petite Beauty Salon.

Board turns down request to withdraw from Pasadena

On Thursday, June 7, the State Board of Education Subcommittee voted to recommend against transfer of Sierra Madre students attending Pasadena Unified School District to the Arcadia Unified School District.

Kathryn Droneburg made the motion that the transfer be disapproved and when Chairman Kenneth Peters could not get a second from the committee, he seconded the motion himself. The vote was 5 to 0 against the transfer.

That day the petitioners for Sierra Madre Parents for a Better Education (SMPBE) presented their case to withdraw Sierra Madre from PUSD and join AUSD before the subcommittee.

The proceedings began with a report from the professional staff of the committee which found that of the seven criteria for transfer, Sierra Madre failed to meet two-and-a-half. The transfer would result in a 1.8 percent drop in the white population of PUSD and would, therefore, promote racial inequality in the system.

Since Pasadena would be forced to redraw attendance lines as a result of the transfer it would have a negative impact on the educational programs.

Finally, the staff found that the transfer might adversely affect AUSD if the 1300 Sierra Madre students, now in private schools, suddenly joined the public system, and that property values would be increased in Sierra Madre. Therefore, they recommended to tne board that the transfer not be approved.

Speaking first for SMPBE, Suzanne Levoe rebutted that staff's findings on three of the criteria: 1) That all the private school children of Sierra Madre would return to the public system was overstated. Even before Sierra Madre became a part of PUSD, 30 percent of its student population were in private schools, 2) The 1.8 percent drop in white population is not significant and was called statistically insignificant by the agency which prepared the report for the staff, 3) The PUSD is required by state law to redraw its attendance boundaries in 1991 anyway, whether or not Sierra Madre is in the system.

Karma Bell, a three-time president of the Sierra Madre PTA, cited safety as the number one issue. Kathy Forresta talked about her efforts to get her son tested for special needs. The pervasive attitude in the system, she felt, was that these children and their parents were unwanted.

Mark McMillan told the story of his first son as he progressed through the PUSD and vowed that "I don't want them to do to my youngest son what they did to him."

Bart Doyle spoke saying that the people of Sierra Madre have worked within the system and found that it doesn't work. Addressing Criterion No. 4, on racial balance, he claimed that "Segregation was wrong because it offered services to some while denying them to others. But it is equally wrong to ignore all the other values of education in the name of desegregation."

Anne Pursell, president of the Pasadena School

Braley leaving Maranatha; Allen to serve as principal

Stephen V. Allen will take over as principal of Maranatha High School, Sierra Madre, at the end of June, following the resignation of Dr. James W. Braley.

Braley says he is "going into partial retirement, spending some time doing educational consulting work with schools and other organizations."

The Braleys will move to central Arizona where they have recently purchased a home.

Allen comes to Maranatha with 16 years of educational and administrative experience at all levels of school from elementary through high school in both public and private Christian schools.

He has a Master's degree in educational administration and supervision and is presently working toward his Doctorate degree.

Allen and his wife, Jan, have two children, Ryan, 9, and Brianna, 5.

Braley has worked in and with Christian schools for more than 34 years. His ministry began as a teacher at Pasadena Christian School, Pasadena, where he was a teacher, principal and superintendent during his 18-year tenure.

For eight years he was director of educational services for the Association of Christian Schools International. During that time, he developed a curriculum library, worked with many Christian school conventions and conferences across the United States. During his work with ACSI he helped publishers develop Christian textbooks.

Upward trends

Small business owners in California are optimistic about economic prospects in 1990 in general and about the growth of their own companies in particular, according to results of the Small Business Alliance Survey, sponsored by Bank of America with the University of California.

"The closer they get to their own companies, the more optimistic their outlook gets," said Dave Richardson, Bank of America vice president and director of Marketing Research.

Starting with the broadest view, 51 percent of those entrepreneurs surveyed expect the U.S. economy to grow this year. Significantly more owners, 68 percent, expect the California economy to expand.

Moving closer to the respondent's own backyard, 72 percent feel their industries will grow this year. And the highest level of optimism is reserved for their individual businesses.

Furthermore, Richardson said, 78 percent of owners feel their firms will grow this year, with 31 percent of that group expecting robust growth (increases of 5 percent or more). An additional 47 percent believe they will experience moderate growth of 1 to 4 percent in 1990.

Customer satisfaction is the main reason small business owners feel their companies will grow. Some 91 percent of those who expect growth said they believe their customers are satisfied. There is a general sense of optimism among owners themselves (80 percent) as well as among their customers (65 percent). Business owners also cited hard data — upward trends in their own orders and sales (67 percent) and in their industry (62 percent) as reasons for their optimism.

Advertising is mentioned most frequently by those who anticipate growth this year — by one in four — as the specific step they are taking to stimulate growth. A total of 44 percent cite advertising, sales and marketing as the tools they use. Other techniques used to stimulate growth vary, with top choices including improved service (11 percent) and the introduction of new products (10 percent). One in five (22 percent) indicate they are doing neither in particular.

Under the Pepper Tree

by Jan Reed

● Cory Malone, daughter of Yolanda and Jim Malone; Amanda Apperson, daughter of Ernest and Pamela Williams; and Elizabeth Powell, daughter of Brian and Barbara Risser, were chosen over 100 fourth and fifth graders by a casting company to compete in a further cut for a commercial for Craisens, a new product.

● Russ and Doris Jensen, former Sierra Madreans now living in Canada, stopped in at The News Monday to say "hello" to all their friends "out there." They are on their way to Durango, Colo., where they will have a reunion on June 21 at Burt Embree's with the Schwartzes, Louie George and Gordon Stinman families, all Sierra Madreans.

Russ was born here and Doris also lived in Sierra Madre. Doris' father, E. W. Lawrence, lives in Arcadia with his wife, Alice Benjamin Lawrence.

Russ reminisced about the second Trail Race ever run in which his sister, Grace, came in as second female. Two females ran that year, he grinned.

"I was working the trail for the Scouts and when she came by, I decided to run the rest of the way with her. She won a trophy," he said.

Grace sculpted a mountain with the two shown on the trail, depicting Mt. Wilson, and "you could really tell what it was all about," Russ said.

Twenty-five years ago the Jensens moved to Vancouver, B.C. where they started a hardware business. A month ago they retired and started a tour to reunite with friends around the country.

Although they won't be home until July 1, they urge friends to call and/or write them at 3034 Mardale Rd., N. Vancouver, B.C. V7R 1E6 or call (604) 987-9048.

At one time Doris worked for Rudy Hartman in the drug store, she said.

● Louise and Charles Corp (the latter former Mayor and present water commissioner) were in Park City, Utah, last weekend. And what were they doing there, we asked them. Louise was reuniting with her nurse class of 1943, she explained. There were 14 in the class and Louise was hoping that all of them would be there when she left Sierra Madre.

Charles told us, "Louise, who was known by her classmates as "Crooky," graduated Sept. 30, 1943 and we were married Oct. 1, 1943."

Congratulations to both of you.

● It's fun to get away occasionally. No matter how hard I try, I always take too many clothes and I always forget something I can't do without.

Like cotton balls.

You'd think a good hotel would remember to stock cotton balls in their rooms. Not this time. And dampened tissue just doesn't cut it. But, heck, for three nights it shouldn't be that bad.

I groped in the carryon bag for my toothbrush and then I noticed the little thing Don has on his toothpaste to squeeze out the toothpaste systematically instead of in bunches the way I do it. It's this thing that fits around the tube and as you use more toothpaste, you just run it up the tube instead of grabbing the tube in the middle.

I'll have to get one of those.

● The toothbrush seemed harder than mine. Whoops. It was the wrong color. I was brushing with Don's toothbrush. I rinsed it thoroughly and tried to dry it so he'd never guess I'd used it.

● Everytime we came back to the room after a big dinner, I noticed that the maid had left petite fors and chocolates on the table for us. And I was always too full. I tried so hard not to leave them, but guess what? They did not come home with us, unfortunately.

● Hotels always have those great terry robes that are available for use while you're a guest of the hotel. Each time I swear I'm going to purchase one and each time I chicken out. There's never room in the suitcase with all those clothes I didn't wear.

● They have the best pens in hotels. In fact, I'm still using one I took home a year ago. And now I have two more . . .

● I judge hotels by the stationery. And I always take it home, then forget to use it. Well, it's not really that I forget, it's just that I write so few personal letters anymore. But when I finish the Pepper Tree, I kind of feel like I've written a blanket letter to everyone.

● We had a wonderful "family" weekend with Barbara and Bruce, Camee and Wesley. We'll have to do that again, very soon.

● Several merchants have been complaining about the high percentage of stock that is mysteriously disappearing, which means that there's a lot of shoplifting going on.

We have to remember that those who shoplift probably make prices rise because the merchants have to make it up somehow . . .

From Colonel 'Mad Mac'

Dear comrades: It was with a heavy heart that I inform you of the recent remake of Bambi meets Godzilla at the state school board meeting Friday, the 8th day of June. It's for this reason I'm granting the request from so many of our troops to wear black arm bands to express their grief over the loss of those brave human comrades who valiantly tried to liberate their occupied lands from the unified of Pasadena and ally to the East.

Armed only with truth and shielded with their honor, they faced a cruel and unreasoning monster and stood ready to defend, even to the end.

It's to the POWs that we extend our most heartfelt sympathy as they are the ones whose loss is greatest. It's for them we extend our invitation to walk among us, rest a moment in our shade, listen to the wind whisper words of comfort through our leaves and to take strength from us.

To them we say: Take heart, the fallen shall not stay down long, and the monster is not without a sense of pain and can bleed. It now knows you have teeth, and you must continue to use them lest it forget.

Colonel "Sad" Mad Mac

Hats off

Hats off to SMPBE — To Bart Doyle, Suzanne Levoe, Karen Allsop, Karma Bell, Maryanne McMillan, Leslie Hinton, Deb Wigger and many others who put forth their efforts in the cause for better education.

No, SMPBE did not win the case in Sacramento to join the Arcadia school district, but they won the support and hearts of residents from far reaching areas. Their dedication, determination and belief in a cause has won these Sierra Madre parents a high level of esteem.

Congratulations for a job well done, and yes, our hats off to all who helped in any way to encourage and aid this dedicated group.

Thanks to firemen

I would like to publicly thank Assistant Fire Chief Roger Lowe and EMTs Steve Smith and Tommy Barilla for their prompt response to the emergency call at Heasley Field last Friday when my daughter broke her leg. Their immediate response and professionalism calmed us both and helped ease her pain. Thanks, guys!

Debbie Sheridan

Thanks to EMTs

This letter is to thank Steve Smith and Tommy Barilla, the EMTs who took me to the hospital when I broke my ankle. They made me a little happier and helped some of the pain go away by being funny and nice. I had to have surgery on my ankle because I broke the growth plate so they sent me flowers. So I just wanted to thank them. I hope you don't have to have EMTs for any reason, but if you do then I hope the EMTs you have are as nice as Steve and Tommy.

Biography of family written by members, presented here

In Remembrance of Fred and Teresa Osti
A Biography by their children
June 6, 1990

With the prospect of a better life in America, Fred Osti left his home in the Sud-Tirol of Austria. It was the turn of the century when Papa came to Southern California and began his new life by helping to plant the Guasti Vineyards in Fontana. During the years he worked at Guasti he returned to Austria twice to find a bride. On his third trip back he found just the right girl, Teresa Osti.

Mamma was the youngest of five children and it was customary for the eldest daughter to be married first, but Papa had made up his mind to marry Teresa. So, with her father's consent, preparations began for the wedding and the subsequent trip to America. Papa and Mamma were married on Apr. 21, 1914, and left that very same day for America.

On June 28, 1914 the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria-Hungary set in motion the diplomatic manuevers which ended in World War I.

Papa was born in the obscure little village of Masi d'Avio in the beautiful Adige Valley of Austria (now the Alto Adige region of Italy). Mamma was born just a few miles away in the very old town of Borghetto Sul Adige. The source of livelihood for this region was gardening and grape vineyards which provided much practical knowledge for Mamma and Papa and the life they would encounter in America.

Arriving in New York by ship, they traveled across the United States by train. They settled in San Pedro, California where Papa worked as a longshoreman. Mama gave birth to their first child, Leanora, then came Marino Fred, Florence, John and Robert.

Their other ventures during this time included a chicken farm and dairy. Then Papa suffered an injury on the job and developed asthma. A very difficult time followed and Papa was not expected to live.

Through an acquaintance, Papa traveled to Sierra Madre and stayed in a two-room cottage near the existing monastery. Noticing a slight improvement in his condition, the trip was made several more times before the decision was made to move the family in 1924. They first rented at 308 N. Adams, then moved to Pasadena for a very short stay before buying the two-room house located at the southwest corner of Grove and Grandview.

For the first two years in Sierra Madre, Papa continued to be very ill and unable to work. Mamma took the full responsibility for her family and by working outside the home provided for them.

When Papa regained his health, he went back to gardening, drawing on the wealth of knowledge and experience he had gained in Austria. The first gardens were located at their home but eventually there were crops being raised at the corner of Mt. Trail and Grandview and also on East Montecito.

In addition to the vegetable gardening, Papa also worked as a gardener for many of Sierra Madre's distinguished families. At first there was no transportation and the children went door-to-door selling the produce. Then a vegetable truck was added as one of the children was old enough to drive. While Papa produced superb produce, Mamma's talents surfaced in her exquisite flowers which were sold right along with the produce.

Over the years the Sierra Madre Garden Club and the Wistaria Vine awarded Mamma with many 1st, 2nd and 3rd prize ribbons for her beautiful Zinnias and Chrysanthemums.

As the years passed, the family continued to increase with the birth of Louise Elise, Fred Jr., David Caesar, Louie, Jean Sylvia and Daniel George. The two-room house also underwent many additions and changes over the years to accommodate the family.

Many people remember, even today, the huge Victory Garden which Mamma and Papa had during World War II at the northwest corner of Grove and Grandview. People came from

Out and About

By Dick Rogers

I voted. I wasn't happy about it, but I voted. I can't get too warmed up over Gutson Frigdip running for the "Central Committee." The propositions were too many and too laced with double talk. I never got to vote for things I would like to vote for, i.e., issues which would limit our headlong rush to oblivion, and to vote for people I know.

For example, we are being asked to drastically limit our use and consumption of water. We face a serious crisis on the issue. Yet, we have water being used by the thousands of acre feet for things like golf courses (yes, I golf), car wash facilities, and theme parks. We are running short on water for the people who now populate our area, yet, we see dozens of new developments on the drawing boards . . . as though one dynamic has little to do with the other. I would love to be able to vote on an initiative which would limit growth to available resources and services.

Here's one for you. How about something requiring that courts maintain a schedule that resembles the work week of the rest of humanity. Starting at 10 a.m., breaking at noon for a two-hour lunch, and quitting in time to catch the early news isn't exactly perfection.

As for voting for people I know, I find that too many of our politicians are attorneys. I know a lot of attorneys, but I wouldn't vote for them, and that's not a put-down. My preference for representation runs to people who say "take it or leave it" instead of "submitted." I also find more warmth in flannel than in button-down polyester, if you get my drift.

So, what does this all mean? It should be no secret that what ails people in Sarah Mudrah, when it comes to voting, is a virus that spans the country . . . we're bored to tears with the ineptitude of the whole thing.

A doubtful vote when we're and aboutful.

Joe Hardy's lip, pride intact

If it hadn't been for Tommy Sullivan and Jeremy Townsend's mother, things for Joe Hardy could be different this week.

It happened last Wednesday evening when Joe, 11, tried to get a foul ball at Heasley field. He hopped the 12-foot fence but then his shoelace caught on the top of the fence and he fell on his face.

Tommy Sullivan, 13, raced over to Joe since he was there to cover the ball and lifted the 11-year-old up from his face. There was lots of blood since Joe had bit his lip and hurt his nose.

Dave Arden opened the fence and Debbie Griffin, Jeremy's mother (who is a nurse), immediately started working on the youth. She cleaned out the wound and soon Joe was on his way to Methodist Hospital, Arcadia, where he had four stitches in his top lip.

By Monday he still looked like he had been in the boxing ring but he was chipper and trying to smile at his helpers.

Jeremy Townsend, Joe Hardy, Tommy Sullivan

Tom is the son of Carolyn and Bill Sullivan. Joe's parents are Cheryl and Paul Hardy.

Jeremy's father is Doug Townsend.

And that night the Yankees came off in first place against the Red Sox.

Tom is on a pony team with the Twins, Jeremy is with the Astros and Joe has been playing with the Dodgers in Sierra Madre.

Saturday 'plant duty' accomplished by club

By Phyllis Chapman

It did not matter that it was a Saturday and only 8 a.m. A detail of green thumbers from the Sierra Madre Civic Club gathered at City Hall. Their purpose: to replant flowers in the rotunda plant bed.

This is a special club project in cooperation with the city's Beautification Committee. Several times a year, and with money earned from recycling aluminum cans, the club purchases seasonal blooming flowers and plants these to keep the rotunda attractive.

This time, after weeding and cleaning at the bed, petunias and vincas were planted. Flowers were salvaged from the overgrown plants that were removed and these were made into bouquets and taken to the Sierra Madre Skilled Nursing Facility for the enjoyment of the residents.

The work crew was headed by Judie Cimino, Civic Club's representative to the Beautification Committee. Helping were Darlys Brechwald, club president, Arlie Hahn, Joan Crow, Kathleen Coyne, Sheri Burnett, a member of the Sierra Madre Parks and Recreation Commission; Margaret Switzer, immediate past president of the club; and Shirley McGillicuddy, a member and past chairman of the Beautification Committee.

MAIN STREET
By Ron Hutson

Downtown housekeeping is always a challenge under the best of conditions. Add in parking lot construction, some water main and street work plus new building construction and the challenge turns into a housekeeping nightmare.

Simple things our downtown business owners can do can make a big difference. Sidewalk sweeping is a good place to start. Why sweep? Dirt, papers and trash laying on sidewalks in front of stores have a way of finding their way inside. Dust and grime settles on shelves and merchandise, adding unnecessary cleaning chores. Worse yet, over time merchandise can be soiled or damaged, adding to the overhead. At a minimum, street dirt detracts from the stores image, both inside as well as out.

Tips on sidewalk sweeping. First, keep a putty knife handy for your morning ritual. That way you can scrape up gum and other gooey substances before they attach themselves to the sole of a customer's shoe and track in on your floor. Hot weather is here and a glob of bubble gum can be pretty messy. It can also be costly to remove from carpet.

Daily, that's the next tip. In addition to providing a good opportunity to chat with a neighbor and getting some much needed exercise, sweeping sidewalks on a daily basis is an excellent marketing tool. People driving, or walking by, will immediately appreciate your housekeeping efforts. Everyone likes a clean environment. They will be impressed with your regular effort.

Another tip. Don't spoil the image by sweeping trash off your sidewalk into the gutter. Keep a dustpan next to your broom so that sidewalk trash can go into the trash barrel, not the street. Trash and dirt in the gutter simply waits for the first strong gust of wind to relocate itself back on the sidewalk.

Use that putty knife to clean grass and weeds out sidewalk cracks and along the sidewalk's curb edge. Check out your tree well for weeds, cans and miscellaneous trash. Keep that waist trim. Stoop over, pull those weeds, pick up the cans and trash.

Two more simple tools, a rag and detergent filled spray bottle. Before going back inside, check your front door handle and door frame. Are they dirty or sticky? A quick spray and wipe makes them fresh, clean and inviting to your customers. Same goes for that display window ledge. Keeping the window clean is only half the battle.

If all this sounds like too much work each morning, here's another tip. Get together with the neighbor on each side, split the cost of hiring a handy man or teenager to do the chores. It won't be that expensive. Just think of the difference it will make to the appearance of your downtown.

Contact Main Street c/o Ron Hutson, Project Manager, 232 W. Sierra Madre Blvd., Sierra Madre, CA 91024. See you on a cleaner Main Street.

For Book Lovers

Loretta Worrell

"I believe there is a common thread that can be found in all the experiences of our life. The work is to identify that thread," the psychologist said to me this week.

George Oppen, one of the great American poets of this century, believed in a similar quest: to find that one thread and to keep hold of it.

In finding this thread is our sanity, our meaning, our true life story.

So, maybe it was no accident that in the same week that I was reminded of the thread, I was able to see Milbre Burch's presentation of stories entitled, "The Woven Word" at the Hastings Library.

"Stories build bridges between cultures and peoples," began the storyteller, standing in front of the three garments mounted on the back wall: an Armenian tapestry designed as a jacket, a Japanese kimono, and a brightly woven scarf that might have been made in Mexico, Haiti, or Africa. All of these countries contributed to Ms. Burch's repertoire of stories.

There was a common thread to each of them, though they came from different cultures and different parts of the world. Each story was a jewel of well-selected parable, a mirror held up to the listener that said, "Look here, see if you don't fnd yourself, sometimes as a beautiful creature of virtue, sometimes as the ogre; weak or strong, foolish or wise, good or evil."

I have said before in reviewing Burch's "Saints and Other Sinners" that her talent is luminous. She performed that collection of stories two weeks ago in Ramos Auditorium at Caltech to another admiring audience. Referring to that collection of gems, at Hastings last week, she described them as "religious stories" of faith, struggle, endurance and small human kindnesses."

Burch seems to have an affinity to such stories, selecting those that she feels a connection to, an honest liking of, in order to perform them wholeheartedly, as is her style. When you sit up close, you observe the perfect weaving together of story and expression, movement and character, voice and dialect. The art of storytelling is an intimate art. The eyes of the audience meet the eyes of the storyteller, and whatever the story means to take you, you are there.

We live in the City of the Future in one of the high tech capitals of the world. The various media can bombard our senses and push our imaginations beyond the boundaries that have contained them. We have access to theatrical extravaganzas that electrify us and cost $100 a seat. Even so, I celebrate the opportunity to watch one person tell a story with nothing but their own gift, one unique thread that is pure gold.

I like to watch them spin it, and as a character in Milbre's story says, "I prefer to just listen, let the pictures in my head settle into my heart."

Mater Dolorosa schedules Fiesta June 24, Sierra Madre

The Passionist priests and brothers of Mater Dolorosa Retreat Center and Monastery will host their once a year Family Fiesta on Sunday, June 24 on their grounds located at 700 N. Sunnyside Ave. in the city of Sierra Madre.

Admission is free for the day beginning at 11 a.m. and ending at 7 p.m. The Fiesta features a carnival midway, major rides, bingo, a kiddyland, pony rides, clowns and ninja turtles plus free entertainment throughout the day.

One of the highlights of the day is the Food Galleria, which will offer foods from Mexico, the Philippines, and Italy along with carnival standards such as hot dogs, hamburgers, cotton candy, sno-cones, pizza, a homemade sweet booth and barbecued beef sandwiches. Unique at the Passionist Fiesta is their Barbecued Beef Dinner. Cooked in specially designed outdoor ovens, full-course dinners are served to thousands each year. This year, an entree choice of Barbecued Chicken is being added to their menu. Special "Early Bird Dinner" discount tickets are sold between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.

A drawing on a 1990 Buick and cash prizes will be held at 7 p.m.

This is also the one day of the year that the doors of the Retreat Center are open to the public for free guided tours, which include bus rides through the monastery grounds.

The Passionists came to Sierra Madre in 1923 to work preaching missions and giving retreats. The proceeds from the annual Fiesta have helped them continue in their retreat ministry here. The original retreat house building and the Fr. Isidore O'Reilly Wing, added in 1985, were funded in part by Fiesta funds.

Fr. Arthur Carrillo, C.P., director of the retreat center, is anticipating another record crowd. Last year's crowd was estimated to be over 15,000. Free parking for more than 5000 cars will again be provided.

On Stage

By Mary Cogswell Baum

Many openings this week make individual reviews brief:

The Sierra Madre Playhouse opened "The Inspector Calls" by J.B. Pristley, a mystery with a difference. Priestly stories usually carry social comment and have surprising twists and this one certainly does.

The time is 1912, and a self-satisfied, well-to-do British family are celebrating their daughter's engagement. An inspector arrives searching for the reason for a young girl's suicide. Just when you think you have the answer, the twists start.

The actors tell their story well.

James Ledford is the complacent father and Susan Gunther is the socialite mother. Veronique Merrill makes a petulant daughter and Kevin MacDonald is the playboy son. Brad Kahn is the conservative fiancee (with no help at all from his Harpo moustache and peculiar toupee), Gary Page is dignified and forceful as the Inspector, and Evelny Tollman is the maid.

Director John Frances has keep his stage pictures interesting throughout the talky but interesting script.

"The Inspector Calls" plays Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. through July 14 with 2 p.m. matinees on June 24 and July 1. Call 355-4318.

"Man of La Mancha" is a remarkable musical with a remarkable score and the California Music Theater version now at the Pasadena Civic is one of their better productions. Ken Howard (late of TV's "White Shadow") proves to have a very good voice and plays with gusto the duel role of the actor-poet Cervantes and the Spanish country squire who imagines himself as the last hero of chivalry. Marilyn McCoo makes a spirited Aldonza, the serving wench whom he idealistically transforms into his lady-love, Dulcinea. It's a good show and as moving as always, the action scenes well handled except for a rather tentative battle, and with a full complement of colorful characters. Outstanding among them is Antonia Long as a vigorous Moorish dancer and Jack Ritschel as the sympathetic Innkeeper.

Gary Davis directs and his usual heavy-handed style seems to fit well enough.

"Man of La Mancha" runs through June 24.

Then there is the musical "Peter Pan" currently at the Pantages in Hollywood which is a real wow! Olympian Cathy Rigby has become a genuine musical star with a clear, ringing voice and lots of acting ability. With her compact, athletic body, she can play a very convincing small boy and she flies with fine abandon. Stephan Hanan as Hook is the satiric version of a romantic anti-hero that Barrie intended and hsi crew are the glamorous pirates of a boy's imagination, as are the gorgeous Indians. Extra dance numbers have lengthened the production until matinees are probably best for the little ones, but this is a "Peter Pan" to set any child dreaming.

This production only lasts through July 1. Tickets can be charged at (213) 410-1062.

And almost any child would be fascinated by the double bill of opera at the Music Center's Pavilion, "Higgelty Pigglety Pop" and "Where the Wild Things Are," the Maurice Sendak books put to music.

"Wild Things" works best, being a tight, simple story, and its staging is an animated version of the picture book. The Wild Things are amazing, 10 feet tall and gabbling to each other in what is obviously monster language as they are subdued by the aggressive Max, sung with imagination by Karen Beardsley.

"Higglety" is a more complex and symbolic story, starring a Sealyham terrier named Jenny, and it is best enjoyed if one is familiar with the book, but its fantasy characters are amusingly realized, including an enormous and very carnivorous lion and an overly chatty potted plant.

I'm no expert on opera, but I enjoyed it and so did my 3-year-old companion.

There are only three more performances of the double bill, Saturday at 8 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m. For more information, call (213) 972-7211.

Advanced grammar

"Advanced Grammar and Powerful Vocabulary" is a course designed for foreign born speakers of English and is scheduled for Mondays and Wednesdays, June 25 to Aug. 29, 7 p.m. to 8:50 p.m. at California State University, Los Angeles, Building L. Registration fee is $225. Visa and MasterCard are accepted. To register call (213) 343-4900, Continuing Education.

Art Fair 'great success,' according to Chair Sommer

The 28th Annual Sierra Madre Art Fair, held on May 19 and 20, was a great success, according to representatives.

This year's Art Fair brought a number of changes. The puppet shows held three times on Saturday were a hit with both adults and children. On Sunday, Sharon Hollingdahl, the "Living Doll," performed. One child said, "There's the lady that isn't real."

Almost 150 artists showed their works at the Art Fair, the highest number ever. It is doubtful that Memorial Park could accommodate any more artists. The city's Dial-A-Ride bus provided by City Administrator Jim McRea was used to transport visitors to and from the Mariposa parking lot.

The function, say supporters, more than fulfilled its primary purpose: a fund-raiser for the Friends of the Sierra Madre Library. Although the exact numbers have not yet been calculated, the sales at the Art Fair were the highest ever. More importantly, the profits, which go to the Sierra Madre Library, exceeded $20,000.

City Librarian Toni Buckner says that "We just could not provide many of the services that are important to library users without the Friends."

Many other civic organizations also raise funds at the Art Fair. The Gooden School sold many varieties of home-baked bread. Sierra Madre Historial Society had lemonade as usual and the Kiwanis sold ice cream and pizza.

This year's poster and T-shirt art was drawn by Paul . amabla. His painting of a mother showing her child to the sun is a dramatic example of one of the many types of art available at the Art Fair. Only a few of the T-shirts (small sizes only) and sweatshirts (medium only) are still for sale at the Sierra Madre Library, 440 W. Sierra Madre Blvd.

Art Fair Chairperson John Sommer thanks all the volunteers that helped out. "The Art Fair couldn't exist without them" he said. About 100 persons from Sierra Madre and nearby communities helped to put on the two-day Art Fair.

The attendance at the Art Fair cannot be precisely determined because admission is free. Chairperson Sommer estimates that more than 15,000 people attended this year.

Deborah Jean Frank

Deborah Jean Frank graduates with honors; granddaughter of Tates

Deborah Jean Frank will be graduating with highest honors from Santa Monica High School, June 21. She will be entering the University of California, San Diego, on a Regents Scholarship next fall as a sophomore, majoring in molecular biology.

Throughout her school career, Debbie has won many awards, and has been named as one of the "Outstanding Students of America." She has been active in band and orchestra, playing the flute; also, into soccer and swimming. She went to the Soviet Union in the summer of 1989 with the "People To People" program.

Debbie is the granddaughter of Ruth and Paul Tate of Sierra Madre. She was born in the Sierra Madre Hospital (now the Skilled Nursing Facility) on July 3, 1972. Her mother was the late Barbara Jean Tate Frank.

Community honors 90-year-old Helen Frey

A giant 90th birthday party for Helen Frey, resident of Sierra Madre for 37 years, drew over 100 Sierra Madreans and family members to the historic Essick House on Saturday, June 9.

Best wishes from Pres. George and Barbara Bush, a Certificate of Recognition from the U.S. Congress and Congressman Carlos Moorhead, the California State Senate and State Senator Newton Russell, as well as congratulations from former Sierra Madre Mayors Gordon and Elaine Rudolph, were among the hundreds of "Happy Birthday" wishes sent for the occasion.

State Assemblyman Richard Mountjoy presented a Certificate of Recognition from the California Legislative Assembly. Councilman and former Mayor Dr. Gary Adams presented a resolution from Sierra Madre City Council, declaring June 15 Helen Frey Day in Sierra Madre in honor of her birthday and years of volunteer service for some 30 different community organizations and causes. Those include over 1400 hours of volunteer service for the Sierra Madre Skilled Nursing Facility in the past year and current service for the election board, Beautification Committee, Wistaria Fete Committee, Daughters of the American Revolution and Republicans.

All four of Frey's children and three spouses, eight of her 15 grandchildren and three of her eight great - grandchildren joined in the celebration.

Frey is known as the "Snowflake Lady" for her beautiful hand-crochetted snowflakes, and she had made one, as a present from her to family and friends, for each guest attending the gala party.

— J.M.

Congregational

Ken Walker, minister of music, will be speaking at the 8:15, 9:45 and 11:15 a.m. services on Sunday, June 17. His message and the special vocal and instrumental music will center on the timely theme, "In Our Father's Honor."

At SMCC we have devoted our Music Ministry to the primary purpose of exalting God. All year long our goal together as musicians is to prepare and to offer our best song of praise to our glorious God.

Our function is to enhance worship, not to merely perform music. Whenever the choirs and orchestras succeed in promoting the congregation to give more beautiful and heartfelt praise to the Lord, then God has answered our main prayer as musicians.

This is why our 10-month choir season culminates, not with a big evening concert, but rather, with a Sunday morning celebration in the midst of the whole congregation. Together, as an entire assembly of "praisers," we offer to God a Festival of Worship. This year, the children, the adult choirs, and the orchestra will lead all the people in a marvelous experience of praise and worship called "Exaltation." Singing scripture is including such songs as "This is the Day," "Our God Reigns" and "We Exalt Thee." As God's word is sung, we anticipate the fulfillment of His promise that He will make Himself powerfully known in the midst of our praises (Psalm 22:3).

Sunday, June 17 is the date of our Festival of Worship. This will be SMCC's fourth annual opportunity to make a very special holiday of Father's Day. We will not only honor our fathers, who have helped raise us through life, but we will also honor our Father in heaven who has raised us to eternal life.

At the 6 p.m. evening service a video entitled "A Father Looks Back" will be shown. This film presents Dr. James Dobson's own story, a tribute to the father he remembers and honors. Come and enjoy this special evening as a family.

Gloria Dei

The sermon theme for next Sunday at Gloria Dei Evangelical Lutheran Church at 186 W. Highland Ave. in Sierra Madre is "Eternal Life Assurance." It is based on John 10:22-31. Sunday School and Adult Bible Study follow. We invite you to be our guests.

Several years ago, newspapers told how a new Navy jet fighter shot itself down. Flying at supersonic speed, it ran into cannon shells it had fired only a few seconds before. The jet was traveling too fast.

You are also traveling too fast if you don't have time to worship God in a church service, if you don't have time to read the Bible, if you don't have time to pray. If you're neglecting any of these, you're probably traveling too fast to hear the sound of God's voice. You can't tell whether you are in the center of His will. Better slow down before, like the jet, you shoot yourself down.

Bethany

By Al Elby

Are you stuck in a rut or are you in a groove? Do you know the difference when it is happening to you? How can you tell the difference? Clyde was giving us a few hallmarks whereby we could use as a gauge to determine where we were and what was happening.

Listen to the questions that you ask. Do most of the questions that you ask have a negative bias? If they do then you're probably in a negative rut. This is quite common, for too many people feel that they are displaying their intelligence when they criticize. On the contrary, it's much easier to be negative and critical then to be positive and constructive. One can readily see the faults, it doesn't take much intelligence to do that. However, to see the negatives and handle them with a positive and constructive manner takes not only intelligence but ability.

Unfortunately some people go through life and never learn this lesson. They are so obsessed with their making a favorable impression that they lose sensitivity to how people accept their criticism. What usually happens is that one gets a reputation for being consistently negative and as soon as one makes a comment it is relegated to oblivion. So the very thing that they are trying to accomplish, being recognized as perceptive and intelligent, they negate by their consistent negativism. It's an unfortunate paradox, but one that is cardinally true.

Jesus was confronted with this problem with the Pharisees. They were the negative thorn in His side and we'll say more about this next week.

United Methodist

By Rev. Rich LaShure

Rev. Rich LaShure will attend the 1990 sessions of the California-Pacific Annual Conference which began this week at the University of Redlands. Luce Heller, Virginia Wood, Yosh Befu, Rev. Newton Maloney and Rev. Dan Towler will also attend from the church.

The United Methodist Church is comprised of Annual Conferences all across the United States. The local conference, centered in Pasadena, includes Southern California and Hawaii.

This year's conference speaker is Bishop Felton E. May of the Pennsylvania Area who has been given the special assignment of leading the denomination's campaign against drug and alcohol abuse and violence.

At the close of conference sessions, Bishop Jack M. Tuell will read the list of appointments, the pastoral assignments and special ministries of those who serve the 130,000-member church in this area.

Large conference sessions are usually about as interesting to churchgoers as watching cement harden. Yet there is always a chance that the minister will return to his or her assignment with a fresh charge of the Spirit and a renewed enthusiasm to do God's work. The same holds for the laity.

Come to church this Sunday and find a friend.

Notes From the Attic

By Gertrude Gerke

Conversation between Jim Hawks and W.A. Andrews (his partner is business), who grew up in Sierra Madre, discussing the birth and development of Sierra Madre:

"Carter was a man of vision," said Jim Hawks, and he did just about what he said he would do. He bought the 1100 acres from "Lucky" Baldwin. He paid $25 an acre for it, and that was the start of Sierra Madre.

Carter laid out the sold part of it in 10 and 20-40 acre plots at $50 an acre. He got $75 an acre for plots with trees growing on them. My uncle had been sold on it, and so my father Ami D. Hawks and my Aunt Frances Hawks came here and each bought 20-acre plots. My father's acreage consisted of the ground now bounded by East Central Ave. and North Baldwin to East Highland Ave., extending about ⅔ extending to Mountain Trail Ave.

"My father paid $50 an acre. What is it worth now?"

"Well, I'd say it is worth about $10,000 an acre now, and that's some advance."

"I'll never forget the day we arrived here," said Jim. "I was just a kid then, of course. We came down by boat from San Francisco. My first impression sank in. I remember my grandmother brought us a big pan of ripe apricots and turned us loose on them. Well, that seemed like paradise. We had never seen fruit that plentiful. It certainly was a surprise to find all you could eat."

PCC graduation June 15

Main Street, Chamber tell City Council of leadership plan

Ron Hutson, project manager for Main Street and executive director for Sierra Madre Chamber of Commerce, outlined a basic plan for a "core leadership team to unite in the vision of what Sierra Madre downtown should be," before the City Council Tuesday evening at 5 p.m.

He said, "The two groups believe that the presidents of the chamber and Main Street should be part of that organized core as well as the director in charge of economic restructuring — Helen Elliott. I would suggest a landowner and perhaps a consultant from the private sector of town and a representative of the CRA, and a staff representative as well as myself."

He said, "As current properties become vacant we need an existing program to support an initial effort to fill those areas."

City Administrator Jim McRea reminded the council that $750,000 was available from the bond issue that was "not assigned to a particular project. Remember," he cautioned, "the (CRA) agency doesn't build buildings. It operates buildings or fixes infrastructures . . . Soon we may have more retail areas."

Councilwoman MaryAnn MacGillivray agreed with Hutson, "Until we have this board, the ones along the way are going to suffer."

Main Street President Don Murphy said the Design Review Board of the project is "frustrated." He said the DRC believe that an ordinance should be adopted concerning the private sector since "it does what it wants to do."

They install signs, awnings without permits. "We need an ordinance we believe in, enforce it, cause them to think about what they are doing. Until the DRC is an adopted entity (with some teeth) it leaves a hole."

Judy Webb-Martin, president of the chamber, said, "One of the problems is that new businesses are unaware (of needs for permits). There's nowhere for them to get that information. We must have it available to them when they get business licenses."

They discussed the parking problems as they relate to the "burned out area," that area of businesses destroyed in the December fire. To replace the buildings, many more parking places are imperative.

MacGillivray said, "Parking is definitely the dragon here. How about valet parking?"

The group switched to the Mariposa Parking lot and McRea explained that it "would be ready for vehicular use the week of the 18th and totally ready and lighted by July 4, then they start on the eastern area."

Water subject

sprinklers. Are we going to get water kits to the people, telling them how to conserve?"

Mayor George Maurer suggested a friendly letter be dropped off at the home of those people whose sprinkler systems are dumping water into the streets, urging them to conserve water.

Jan Maddox, speaking as a member of the Beautification Committee, said that the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power offers monetary rewards to those who replant their yards to water-conserving plants. She suggested we do the same in Sierra Madre.

Western Waste Industries, Inc., the city's trash haulers, has come back with another rate increase, a 42-cents-per-month increase.

Bernie Nash, spokesperson for the company, noted that "Sierra Madre is ahead of Arcadia and Duarte (in recycling)."

City Councilwoman MaryAnn MacGillivray said that at one point she hopes that our recycling efforts will offset any trash rate increases."

Councilman Gary Adams suggested that the term "water bill" should be changed to "utility bill," and the group agreed to a public hearing on the proposed increase at the next meeting, June 26, 6:30 p.m.

Later in Community Communications, Aksel Pedersen asked about the theft by Western Waste drivers. "What about the trash driver? He steals my cans every week. I want Western Waste to supervise the drivers they have on the street. They are stealing my money and I want it stopped."

In other business, councilmembers chose to adjourn to June 22, 5:30 p.m., to discuss extension of the Hillside Ordinance moratorium. The moratorium was adopted May 8 and will expire June 23.

McRea said, "Such an extension requires a four-fifths vote and we must give a 10-day notice."

The extension, he said, would be 10 months and six days and should be extended "since 1054 is currently under challenge." There are two lawsuits in the works, challenging the Hillside Ordinance, No. 1054.

If enough councilmembers are not present for the meeting of the 22nd, the council will adjourn to June 25, 8 a.m.

The council also adopted Urgency Resolution 90-27 by title only which will amend the agreement concerning guard rails on Chantry Flat Road.

The council Tuesday evening went on record as supporting the Main Street/Chamber suggestion, formulated by Main Street President Don Murphy, that the Mariposa parking lot be raised to 5½

CAPITOL WANDERINGS

By Ron Pulling, Washington Correspondent

June 14 is Flag Day. This year, it may be of more significance due to the recent burnings of the flag and subsequent debate on action to prohibit desecration.

Washington could certainly be called "Flag City." Hundreds of flags are flown from government buildings and monuments every day — many of them for only one day. The flags flying over the Capitol are lowered in the evening and distributed to members of Congress to be re-used for ceremonial purposes throughout the country.

On July 4, 1960, Hawaii achieved statehood and the present 50-star flag became official. The new flag replaced the 49-star flag, which flew for only one year, authorized when Alaska became a state. These are the latest of 11 or more national flags officially accepted for display.

The first, in 1775, was known as The Grand Union or the Continental Colors. Instead of containing a field of stars, the flag combined the British Union Jack with the 13 stripes representing the colonies and signifying colonial unity.

It was quickly replaced in 1777, by three different flags with 13 stars exchanged for the Union Jack. The new Betsy Ross flag, where the stars were arranged in a circle, and the Bennington flag came into being. In the latter, the number 76 was incorporated in the field of stars. The original of this flag can still be viewed in Bennington, Vt.

The Star Spangled Banner was created by the Flag Act of 1795 and contained 15 stars and 15 stripes. It was the flag of our five first presidents.

In 1818, the flag returned to 13 stripes and expanded to 20 stars. The Great Star Flag arranged the stars in the form of a star and flew over the Capital in that same year.

The flag authorized during the Civil War contained 34 stars, including both northern and southern states. This flag first flew under battle conditions, July 21, 1861, at Bull Run, Virginia, a few miles from where we live.

The 48-star flag came into existence on July 4, 1912 and last for 47 years. It covered both World Wars and Korean War.

Pennsylvania Avenue, between the Capitol and the White House, has been the cermonial route for the newly elected presidents and other major events for almost 200 years.

During the past 18 years, the avenue has been undergoing a major facelift by the Pennsylvania Development Corp., (PADC), a project on which your correspondent has been closely associated.

In 1988, PADC received an award from President Reagan, for being one of the best 10 federal projects constructed during the previous four years.

As might be expected, flags are generously displayed along this PADC "Main Street." All 11 of the flags described above can be observed along the facade of the J. Edgar Hoover, F.B.I. building. If you are planning a visit to the Capital, drop by, you might enjoy seeing them flying together, symbolic evidence of our nation's growth and history.

Ice cream's cold facts

Here's a cool fact: about 1.38 billion gallons of ice cream and related products were produced in this country in 1988. Eighteen percent of consumers visit an ice cream parlor at least once weekly. Over one-third of American households at least one gallon of ice cream every two weeks.

Water subject of council debates

feet, triple graded, so that in the future development would be able to use that grade level.

Murphy outlined the proposal: "To raise the proposed grades to create the potential for the development project on its south side. The specifics of the proposal will flatten the proposed grade to near level . . . which would accommodate a future two-story development."

Bartolai said, "It would be a way of preserving that area."

Mayor Maurer said, "It would be an ideal place for auto maintenance shops."

McRea noted that the grading plan would "provide with a future opening directly to Sierra Madre Blvd."

They directed McRea to look into how much it would cost to do a work order that would change the contractor's instructions to the 5½-foot grading plan rather than the 18-inch grading plan that was in the original specifications.

Councilman Adams made the motion to deny the request by the private developer at 90 N. Baldwin Ave. to modify his building to the original drawings so he can have off-site joint parking. The motion passed.

Adams suggested "Encouraging local businesses by entertaining a concept offering those local businesses a 5 percent leeway (in prices against a larger business). It is more costly to operate a small business than a large business. It needs to be formalized and laid out in a plan."

He was speaking to the bids on an air conditioner for the police and fire facility. One local bid was higher than the two out-of-town bids.

June 26 will be a busy council meeting since there will be still another public hearing on the docket: the assessment districts.

Mayor Maurer has suggested obtaining estimates to recodify the zoning code portion of the Sierra Madre Municipal Code. McRea said it might cost "$10,000 to $15,000."

Margaret Buckner suggested that several attorneys in Sierra Madre had offered to do the work free-of-charge.

Lee Cline, in Community Communications, supported the proposal and suggested that those "who don't observe codes such as building multiple units in a R-1 zone be up on a felony charge."

The council suggested that McRea obtain proposals as to cost.

Hastings Ranch Happenings

Creath Smlley, Hastings Ranch Correspondent

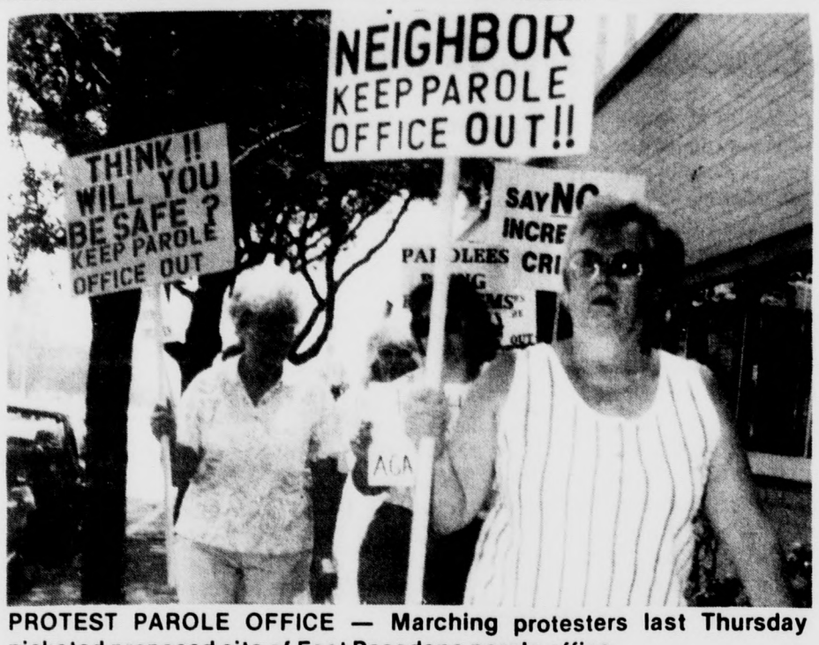

Picketers continue to protest parole site

Pickets waving protest signs marched in front of the proposed site of the East Pasadena parole office last week as the Lower Hastings Ranch Association planned additional protests.

A massive rally will be held at 7:30 p.m. tonight at the Nazarene Church, 3700 E. Sierra Madre Blvd., Pasadena, according to Clifford Benedict, president of the Lower Hastings Association.

The protest meeting tonight is expected to attract legislators from Sacramento, area merchants and representatives of four East Pasadena property owners' associations.

Last Thursday picketing brought to East Pasadena a large contingent of print and audio-visual news media to Pasadena. The people, according to Benedict, "do not want the parole office in this area."

Board turns down request

For two years following his service with ACSI he worked with Christian School Curriculum, developing textbook and learning materials.

Following the completion of the textbook project, Braley was appointed as principal of Maranatha High School in Sierra Madre, which serves students in grades nine through 12 with a maximum enrollment of 525. During this time he was also chairman of the Christian School Partners, a consortium of five Christian schools in the San Gabriel Valley. These schools function as a loosely knit school system.

Braley is a graduate of Biola University and has a Master's degree from Pasadena/Point Loma College. In 1980, Biola University conferred upon him the degree Doctor of Laws, for his contributions to the Christian school ministry.

Dr. Braley has a number of articles published in national magazines and has served as editor of several ACSI manuals and curriculum materials.

He was editor-in-chief of the Character Foundation Curriculum materials. For a number of years he has taught part time in the graduate department of Biola University and serves as a summer instructor at the International Institutes for Christian School Teachers and Administrators at Grace Seminary in Winona Lake, Indiana.

In addition to college instructing, Braley teaches seminars in conferences and schools throughout the United States and Canada. He has also been the guest in conferences and schools in a number of foreign countries.

Board, was the first to respond for PUSD. "Losing Sierra Madre would be devastating to our efforts to promote the values of diversity and a multi-cultural education . . . Sierra Madre has not been hurt by its association with us. It is still a nice place to live."

She pointed out that PUSD has never bused Sierra Madre students into Pasadena but always brought minority children here. She expressed the wish that SMPBE had come to the board first before taking the drastic action of petitioning for transfer. Although no parents from PUSD were there Pursell read a letter from the members of All Children Count, "What future burdens will we visit on our children . . . when we teach them that not all children count."

Dr. Philip Lindscomb, Pasadena superintendent of schools, said that Sierra Madre was important to the district's effort to remain integrated. He noted that Sierra Madre is 11.2 percent of the district's Anglo population.

"They participate heavily in GATE, honors programs, the band, the music department and in special education programs. It would seriously disrupt the academic programs of PHS and Wilson Junior High to lose them."

Carolyn Carlburg, PUSD's attorney, addressed Criterion No. 4. The transfer would exacerbate the racial balance issue. The fact is that the transfer would decrease the white population of minority-dominated PUSD and increase the white population of majority-dominated AUSD. "While they are no longer subject to court supervision (in PUSD) we are obligated to actively continue our efforts."

In rebuttal, SMPBE claimed that "We are losing our most valuable resource, well educated adults." Bart Doyle pointed out that Pasadena has been a legally desegregated unitary system since 1979 when the court order was lifted. Therefore, there is no constitutional violation in transferring Sierra Madre.

Bill Bibliani, director of research for PUSD, spoke first for the Pasadena District rebuttal. He pointed out that when you compare students from comparable backgrounds the white students in PUSD do just as well as the white students of AUSD.

Carolyn Carlburg said that the district understood that the real concerns of the parents were educational and not racial but that the effect of the transfer was racial. Plus, Sierra Madre parents would reap a substantial financial benefit from the transfer. She told the board that they must not promote racial segregation or the further isolation of minority students.

The committee had no questions to ask and Kathryn Droneburg moved that the motion for transfer be disapproved saying, "These concerns have not fallen on deaf ears . . . but there are other methods of resolution."

However, the chair, Kenneth Peters, could not get a second for the motion.

Instead, State Board Member William Makasian asked PUSD to address some of the concerns of the parents that the teachers were unprepared and the school board unresponsive.

Dr. Lindscomb replied that he was new to his position and not familiar with their cases, but that the district regularly sends its graduates on to good colleges.

Anne Pursell reasserted her claim that SMPBE had never voiced its complaints before the petition drive. At this point, after an outburst from the floor, Suzanne Levoe from SMPBE was allowed to correct this assertion by pointing out that Pursell had attended a meeting in her (Levoe's) home well before the petitions were filed.

At a meeting of the full State Board of Education the next day, this recommendation was approved with no further questions of the petitioners or the PUSD.

Osti family

all over the area to purchase the beautiful produce which they grew.

Then came Osti's Landscape Nursery, another family endeavor. While Papa and the boys worked outside the home, Mamma was busy in the backyard propogating and transplanting plants until they were ready for the nursery. Both Papa and Mamma had a real love for the earth and both were endowed with special gifts of working with plants and making them grow.

With a large family there was always much work but also much enjoyment. Papa was an accomplished hunter and passed this skill on to his boys. Hunting trips were numerous and Mamma turned the day's catch into tasty meals. Where Papa showed his marksmanship in hunting, Mama displayed her excellence in fishing. Time after time when no one was able to catch a fish, Mamma would change her rigging until she brought one in. This love for fishing was shared by the entire family and many Sierra Madreans have shared in the abundant catches.

The thing that brought Mamma the greatest enjoyment was canning the Albacore her boys would bring home from deep sea fishing. During her life she had preserved vast amounts of fruits and vegetables but nothing compared to the exuberance and joy displayed over the Albacore.

In their later years, after most of the children had established their own families, there began to be time for some hobbies such as rockhounding and for Mamma a collection of old fruit jars. Mamma and Papa also were able to enjoy many short trips to places around Southern California and a few longer trips which took them to Nevada, Idaho, Canada, Washington, Oregon and Northern California.

Papa received his American Citizenship on Apr. 24, 1931, and Mamma followed on Nov. 17, 1944. This was an all-important step for them and they were very proud to be Americans. One other highlight which meant so much to Mamma and Papa was the celebration of their 50th wedding anniversary in 1964.

Their home was always open and all who came to know them enjoyed their warm hospitality. We know that their contribution to our community is continuing through their grandchildren and great grandchildren.

Papa passed away Nov. 14, 1966, followed by Mamma, May 8, 1974.

Three sons have also passed away: Johnny Osti on Oct. 28, 1978; Mario Osti on Jan. 22, 1982; and Robert (Bob) Osti on July 24, 1988. They are survived by 33 grandchildren, 53 great-grandchildren and eight great-great-grandchildren.

Chamber committee looking for donations

The Adopt-A-School Program of the Monrovia Chamber of Commerce has proven to be an important, highly beneficial part of the community's support of the Monrovia public school system.

In the first six months of the school year, the program furnished more than $17,000 worth of goods and services to the schools and its students, everything from cash donations to field trips, guest speakers and computer hardware.

To support and expand the program, the chamber's Education Committee has designed a marketing plan using brochures, mailings and posters to bring in more participants. While much of the work on the materials is donated, there will still be about $3000 in costs associated with the effort.

The committee is seeking donations to offset the cost of this effort. A contribution to the fund will go toward promoting a program of real benefit to Monrovia students and the community's future work force. Donations may be sent to the Monrovia Chamber of Commerce, Adopt - A - School Program, 620 S. Myrtle Ave., Monrovia, CA 91016.

Savio Lee, chairman for the Education Committee, and Russ Stewart, chairman for the Adopt-A-School Sub-Committee, will be available for further questions regarding this project.

Joan Scherer

Stray cats know they're home when they find Scherer home

Monrovian Joan Scherer will look you straight in the eye and admit that if someone had told her that she would be furnishing a halfway house for stray cats at this time in her life, she would laugh hysterically.

After rearing three sons, she and husband, Dale, now retired, were planning a good life. You know — sleeping late, travel, long days at the beach, visiting grandchildren. Maybe some gardening and gourmet cooking.

Somehow, somewhere, the cards were switched. It all started several years ago when one pregnant stray cat appeared at the front door. It had been raining and the creature was drenched. Scherer lovingly dried her off and prepared a box with soft flannel, for it was obvious that she was close to delivering a litter.

From that day on, strays would appear, obviously quite pregnant, and deliver. Scherer would find homes for the infants and mothers. "One time, I had six mothers who had each delivered five to seven babies each," she moaned, "and these mothers took care of each others' infants. Incredible!"

Through the years, the Good Samaritan has rescued cats hit by cars, provided medical care for injured cats and kittens who had been abused and has always provided a birthing base for new mothers. She fixes nourishing meals for all the cats and for the young ones who are ready to be adopted through a Cat Care agency. "Many times, some of the youngsters are rejected by their mothers and I have had to hand feed them around the clock," she admitted with a sigh.

Scherer winced as one tiny pale yellow kitten scrambled up her leg. "I become very bonded with these darlings," she revealed. "It's important that they all go to fine homes."

In the other room, Snoopy, an older male, once a stray and now a permanent house guest, takes his nap. Mindy, now 12 and another stray, chatters with a new batch of kittens. Right-foot grooms his long coat.

Scherer smiles. "Crazy, eh?"

Children's events

The city of Monrovia, Department of Community Services, will sponsor Tuesday Afternoon Specials held at Monrovia Library Park, 321 S. Myrtle Ave., from 2 p.m. to 2:45 p.m. The specials will feature Wild West events full of fun and adventure for boys and girls ages 6 to 10.

The coming attractions will include: July 3, "Home on the Range," which featurs an old-fashioned cookout with beans and franks and punch to whet everyone's whistle.

July 17, "Tiny Tee Pees," a very special event for children who become part of an Indian Tribe, build Tee Pees and paint their faces like real Indians; July 31, "Happy Ho Down," an invitation is extended to children to get their duds on and come to Library Park for a costume judging contest, as well as an old western sing along and panning for gold; Aug. 14, "Call of the Wild."

Class of '40 celebrates reunion

Members of the Class of 1940 gathered recently to celebrate Monrovia-Arcadia-Duarte High School's 50th class reunion.

Festivities took place at Howard Johnson Plaza Hotel. Close to 150 members attended the gala event.

Bill Shuster of Bradbury created large name tags with the high school photo of each student taken in the 1940 class yearbook. Jean Bradford Radich was chairperson for the reunion.

Former students arrived from Arizona, Colorado, Arkansas, Oregon, Washington, Nevada and various points of California. Joe Bouzek of Rolling Hills served as master of ceremonies for the evening.

Bill Ward of Visalia introduced former teachers who attended and included Charles Dunson, Ruth Foreman, Bernice Lyons McAllister and Clovis Smith.

The group sponsored a float in the Monrovia Day Parade and Don Sandlin of the 1940 graduating class rode atop the float. At noon, following the parade, members enjoyed a picnic at Monrovia High School Friendship Circle in the Quad area. Students from other years attended.

Monrovia High School Alumni Association is an active group that participates annually in the Monrovia Day Parade.

Fragments . . .

How sweet it was . . . I've just returned from a sojurn to the wine country and Eureka. I met two sisters on the flight to San Francisco. They were flying to Washington for their youngest brother's wedding. They chattered about their childhood and what wonderful memories they shared, a family of seven who have remained close.

Driving through the redwoods' Avenue of the Giants towards Eureka, I spotted a triple rainbow. What a wonder! The sound of tires whirling on the wet country road pavement was music. I stopped at a shop in Eureka and purchased a sliver of crystal. It explodes with color as it dances in the sun.

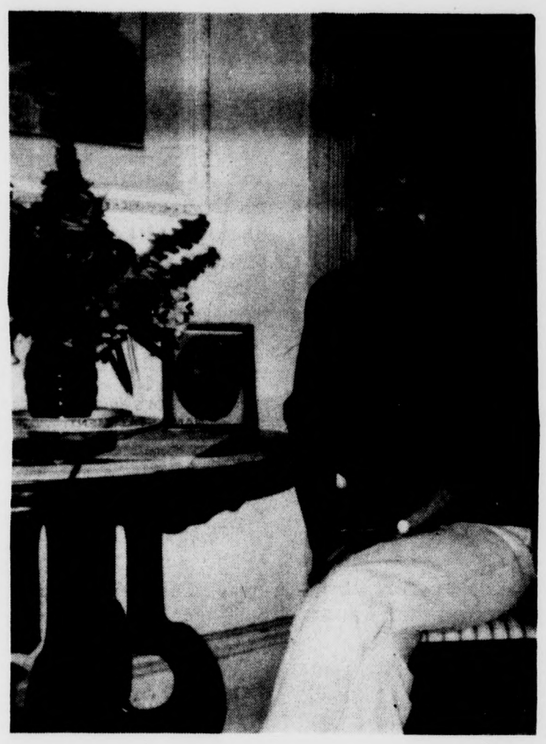

The cats in redwood country seemed quite plump. They sit on fences and stare out of windows. I even saw one sitting in the rain. Even the sparrows are fat, lined up on telephone wires.

I stopped at a small cafe for breakfast. Lumber trucks were hauling down the road. Two young women ran the place. They served me the biggest, roundest hotcakes I have ever seen. Along with ham and eggs and biscuits. "We've been friends for years," they beamed. "Our husbands work there at the lumber mill," and they pointed to the huge, brown barn.

I must tell you the closing shot. As we approached Ontario, our steward, a delight of a man, said, "Welcome to Ontario and thank you for flying United. For you airplane buffs, we want you to know that you've flown on a 1963 old 727 that is going into the museum tomorrow."

"Now he tells us!" said the young chap next to me who had visited Australia.

'Iowa farmhouse' restored by Verhoef and husband

Sharon Verhoef

Sharon Verhoef is an artist and has always loved old houses. Born and reared in Monrovia, she recalls lazy summer days as a child living on Mountain View.

"The days were deliciously long and Monrovia was such a quiet town," she revealed as she gazed at the mountain range in the distance. "I did all the shopping for Mother who did not drive and Dad worked out of town much of the time. When I moved away and came back and saw the Monrovia foothills once again, I knew I was home."

Verhoef moved away and reared a family. Her heart remained in Monrovia. Her Uncle Bob owned a house on Colorado Blvd., an old rickity dwelling, the land having more value than the structure itself. "I had always loved that house," she recalled.

Later, becoming a single mother, she had seriously considered making a move to Nevada. Then she ran into her childhood sweetheart and within months the couple married.

"The house was still in the back of my mind. I sold my home in Temple City and made Uncle Bob and offer. I couldn't believe it when he agreed to our buying the property. He thought we were mad. With so many lovely homes on the market, why would we want this old thing?" chuckled the owner.

They've lived at the residence close to two years now. A new roof has been installed to match the exact style it had been when it was built in 1887. The house is considered a replica of an Iowa farmhouse. The original owner, Capt. Albert H. Johnson, a Union army veteran, married Miss Lavinia Dwelle at Ft. Dodge, Iowa. He brought his wife and four daughters to Monrovia some years later and had the house built in the farmhouse style.

The Colorado Blvd. house was originally located at the corner of Hillcrest and Alta Vista Avenues and was moved to the present location in 1889.

The Verhoefs are members of the Old House Preservation Group and are thoroughly enjoying restoring the two-story find.

Sports camps offered by Occidental

Occidental College will offer both basketball and tennis camps in seven different sessions beginning July 16 and continuing through mid-August.

Four one-week tennis camps will begin July 16, 23, 30 and Aug. 6 for boys and girls who are between the ages of 8 and 16. The sessions will meet each day during the morning. The fee is $50 per week.

Three week-long basketball camps for boys will be offered, beginning July 23, 30 and Aug. 6. Sessions will be held in the afternoon for students between 8 and 17 years. Cost is $60 per week.

Limited enrollment will guarantee individual attention, according to camp director Brian Newhall, Occidental's men's basketball and tennis coach. Each participant will receive a camp T-shirt and notebook and an individual written analysis of his game. Individual skills will be taught and both team offensive and defensive techniques will be practiced. Full court contests will be played each day with players divided by ability.
